collected in 1981 Census. The Ministry of Social Justice & Empowerment have taken up the issue of collection of disability data through the 2001 Census from 1997 onwards with the concerned authorities. We have also offered to provide training to enumerators to be used for this purpose. However, in view of the technical difficulties in collecting accurate disability data in the 1981 Census, the Registrar General & Census Commissioner as well as the Ministry of Home Affairs are of the view that Census is not the right medium for collecting reliable data on disability. It has, therefore, been decided to request the Department of Statistics to direct National Sample. Survey Organisation (NSSO) to undertake a comprehensive sample survey to collect data on the incidence of disability as was done earlier in 1991.
